Content subjects

This track offers students an opportunity to engage in real-life challenges on sustainability faced by companies.

Students collaborate to develop solutions for a company aimed at making a change in this working field. The focus of the assignments will be on Sustainable Fashion and participating companies are working in the value chain of Fashion.

This is done by creating sustainable customer value while taking into account the international aspects of the challenges faced by the fashion industry. The program is focused on making students aware of their professional power to influence and make a positive change.

Learning by experiences is key: Students will participate in at least one online collaboration (COIL) related to the assignment with Universities of Applied Sciences (UAS) from Spain, Rwanda, Indonesia or South Africa. An International Week is organized where students will explore relating topics from lecturers of several UAS. Inholland's lecturing team is further complemented by alumni working in international business and managers in the field, giving students a glance at future career possibilities. To develop the skills needed to work in today's complex international environment students develop their 'critical thinking' and impact making skills to be able to make informed decisions and develop ethical reasoning. A study trip (or replacing assignment) is offered to experience an international surrounding together and work on .

Classes and guided work sessions by lecturers will support students work in the assignment.

Learning outcomes

Global Business Scan and Report

Students (group work 4 students) explore the companies briefing, analyze the current Business Model, preferred markets and agree on deliverables with their client. This will result in an Global Business Scan and factsheet of the most relevant findings. With these findings students develop a Customer Value Proposition for the commissioner, based on the underlying research. Students will pitch their advice to the commissioner by showcasing a visual (poster, ppt, video) in a final event (underlying description of advice is available).

Individual portfolio

Students show they have fundamental knowledge of strategic international marketing, reflect on the workshops and their professional development in this semester. Assessment concludes with individual interview.
